

PROFESSIONAL INFORMATION SKILLS AND OPEN DATA. CHALLENGES FOR CITIZEN EMPOWERMENT AND SOCIAL CHANGE

Dra. María-Carmen Gertrudis-Casado , Dr. Manuel Gértrudix-Barrio, Dr. Sergio Álvarez-García

<http://dx.doi.org/10.3916/C47-2016-04>

INTRODUCTION

Changes in the media ecosystem,

from the user as a mere consumer to the user also as a producer of information.

New training needs , of journalism professionals who must learn to coexist with the new phenomena facilitated by the Internet and 2.0 tools.

Open data and participation , where information and its reuse become an asset for citizen empowerment.

METHODOLOGY AND RESULTS

Experts survey

Some rejection of professional practice professional practice based on open data.

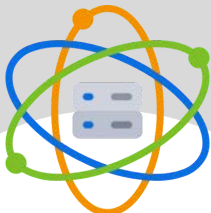

Analysis of multimedia information products based on open data

Collection, processing, analysis and presentation of data-based and presentation of data-based information

CONCLUSIONS

Journalistic training open to science, statistics, interaction design or computer science methodologies

The immediacy of current news subjects to ostracism that part of reality that requires investigation.

Reconnect journalism with a society that has established ways of linking citizenship through new models of collective of collective action.

Comunicar

www.comunicarjournal.com