

INVISIBILISED HUMAN RIGHTS: TRAFFICKING IN HUMAN BEINGS IN THE MEDIA IN SPAIN

Dra. Elvira-Carmen Cabrera-Rodríguez and Dra. Pilar Antolínez-Merchán

<https://doi.org/10.3916/C73-2022-09>

INTRODUCTION

Human rights

Trafficking in human beings is understood as the process by which a person is recruited, transferred and received for subsequent exploitation.

Digital exploitation,

Thanks to these, we can get to know our surroundings and have a vision of what is happening, a vision that in most cases could not be obviously acquired.

OBJECTS AND METHODOLOGY

Mixed approach

The aim of this research is twofold: to examine the coverage of human trafficking in the digital press and the perceptions of media professionals and specialised entities regarding such news.

Content analysis (6 digital newspapers)
Semi-structured interviews (12 journalists)

Production of the news

Role of the media

Visibilisation and awareness-raising of human trafficking

Contextualisation and news approach

Relation between NGOs and the media

Study dimensions

CONCLUSIONES

The media's lack of resources to report on - and, above all, investigate - human trafficking, combined with the work overload in newsrooms, results in a dependence on news agencies for information.

Strengthen a firm commitment to coordination and collaboration with the aim of making visible all forms of trafficking that occur in our country.

Giving victims a voice through quality journalistic practices and joint work between NGOs and the media.

Comunicar

www.comunicarjournal.com